The resolutions carry an appropriation of $1,000.

The speech of the president and that of Mr. Gordon were both loudly cheered, and the incident was a happy closing of the career of one of the most valued men who ever served in the Board of Alder-

A FINE SPEECH.

The speech of President Turpin, which was regarded as a gen of rhetorical beauty, was as follows:

Mr. Gordon, we do an unusual thing to-night, and to me a pleasing duty is assigned. The one cause of regret is the lack of ability on my part adequately to represent my associates and in fitting terms to characterize your merits.

It is a proverb that the people are ungrateful; Chat deserts are unertial. It is a proverb that the people are ungrateful; Chat deserts are unertial characteristic and the proverbent of carking care and the province of the observation that it is, however, a solacing reflection that when the public servant "rests from his labors, his works do follow him." Whether acknowledged as his works or not, they remain through years either in the shape his skillful hand ordained, or theme and the whole people the appliauding spectators.

A POLITICIAN.

However cosmopolitan a man may be, descending a step; however the larger affairs of his country and State may affect him, is is, after all, his home environments that implings with most insistence upon his every day life; that create most immediately his sources of weal or woe. It is, therefore, in a sense true, and not a fancful conceit, that a statesman—a man for the State—may be of less apreciable with the state—may be of less apreciable with the state—may be vidual than a pitted of the state—may be vidual than a pitted of the state—may be vidual than a pitted of the community. You have to this community, and a politician, in the elymological has saved it from mud and has cleaned it of stains; has challenged the application to municipal life of the same standard of inflexible recitive, of spoties morality, of rugged and robust honesty demanded in private dealings. For the city of your adoption, you have though deeply and widely and always wisely; for her you have striven, with "a zeal according to knowledge," to the detriment of your presonal interests and the impairment of your personal interests and the impairment of your health. Did your modesty permit you to question your fellow-dilzens in the language of the horobes of responsible and exatted office. Behold, here I am the striven whose six have I taken? or whose six have I taken? or whose six have I derived any bribe to bind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore that have I oppressed? or of whose hand be a state of the control of the control of the control of any man's hand."

A DANGEROUS CLASS.

There is "a dangerous class" in every community; the men with the stiticus of the community; the men with the stiticus of the community; the men with the stiticus of mine were the men with the stiticus of the community.
